

IMELF expands scope with two new satellite conferences

OTTAWA, May 23, 2017 – Hong Kong is the first Asian city to have their own satellite International Medical Education Leaders Forum (IMELF) conference which is underway this week.

IMELF is an 'invitation only' meeting that brings together global medical education leaders to discuss challenges and solutions to postgraduate medical education and global healthcare. For the past ten years, IMELF has been hosted in Canada with international participation, and interest in sharing IMELF's learnings to a larger audience has grown.

"IMELF Hong Kong is an opportunity for our partners to lead the conversation about what trends and issues are affecting them and their healthcare system," said Royal College President Dr. Françoise P. Chagnon.

"We want to create a movement where the global medical education leaders can address today's most pressing issues in healthcare and develop solutions to ensure better quality of care for all citizens," said Royal College CEO Andrew Padmos.
